

Authorship Agreement

1. Authorship Guidelines¹

1.1 Definition:

An "author" is generally considered to be someone who has made substantive intellectual contributions to a published study. Some journals now request and publish information about the contributions of each person named as having participated in a submitted manuscript.

1.2 Inclusion Criteria for Authorship

All persons designated as authors should qualify for authorship, and all those who qualify should be listed.

Authorship credit should be based on

- substantial contributions to conception and design, acquisition of data, or analysis and interpretation of data;
- 2) drafting the manuscript or revising it critically for important intellectual content;
- 3) final approval of the version to be published.

Authors should meet conditions 1, 2, and 3. Each author should have participated sufficiently in the work to take public responsibility for appropriate portions of the content.

1.3 Exclusion Criteria for Authorship

Acquisition of funding, collection of data, or general supervision of the research group alone does not constitute authorship.

1.4 Collaborative Groups

Collaborative groups should identify the individuals who accept direct responsibility for the manuscript submission. These individuals should fully meet the criteria for authorship/contributorship defined above. Journal editors will ask these individuals to complete journal-specific author and conflict-of-interest disclosure forms. When submitting a manuscript authored by a group, the corresponding author should clearly indicate the preferred citation and identify all individual authors as well as the group name. Journals generally list other members of the group in the Acknowledgments.

1.5 Contributors

All contributors who do not meet the criteria for authorship should be listed in an acknowledgments section. Examples of those who might be acknowledged include a person who provided purely technical help, writing assistance, or a department chair who provided only general support. Financial and material support should also be acknowledged.
